The Norn are a mysterious race from the North. They are almost completely covered in a thin layer of armour (the Armour of the North) and have an unshakeable sense of purpose. Although their physique is strong and they are skilled in the arts of war, they are equally adept in the arts of peace. They are loyal to their people and obey their leaders even to death. The Norn are the only indigenous race in the Midlands, and they are currently the most powerful nation there. Unlike the Dwarves and Elves, who are spread across the kingdom, the Norn are concentrated in the North, the Summer Kingdom and the west. The current Queen is Queen Nyessa. Her husband and predecessor, King Orik, died recently leaving her in the position of the only ruler of Norn. She ruled over Norn for a long time and was a supportive ruler to her people. Queen Nyessa has lived a long life, but is not exactly a young woman anymore. Her firstborn, King Orik, was killed when she was only a few years old. She was to be her husband's heir, but he died and so the crown went to her sister, Helvarr.

Queen Nyessa understands the concerns of her people, and she values her people over her own power. She is an often gentle leader, who is concerned with the welfare of her people. She has a close connection with her dwarven subjects. The Queen has a daughter named Liriel, who has been in and out of favour with the Queen since she was young. There is some degree of tension between the two due to Liriel's choices and the Queen's role as a parent. As the Queen does not treat her daughter in the same way as her other children, Liriel has become more independent. Queen Nyessa wields considerable power in Norn. She is a great ruler and a good friend, but she is a controversial person with some of her nobles. There has been some tension between Queen Nyessa and the Dwarven King, Lord Blackthorn. He was once her husband and friend, but he is now forced to serve the Queen and her family, although she is not entirely happy with his position. 82157476af
